

THIS much-praised course is designed for anyone in the counselling, psychotherapy, psychiatric and medical professions who wishes to be more effective. If you treat depression, anxiety disorders (including PTSD, OCD and phobias), anger, addictions, self-harming, eating disorders, psychosis, relationship problems or chronic pain, this course is for you. However, because it deals with fundamental issues that affect us all, those in many other professions – such as social work, education, sports and management – also find it hugely beneficial.

Students learn powerful brief psychological interventions that are consistently effective and based on a sound, scientific body of knowledge about psychology and mind/body functioning. This knowledge, and the skills that go with it, are easily transferable to other fields (such as parenting, teaching, coaching and back-to-work programmes) and bring about considerable benefits.

Q: Why is this qualification different?

A: Large numbers of counselling and psychotherapy training courses, even at degree level, fail to give people enough information and skills to be really effective. This lets down the increasing numbers seeking help for psychological distress, sometimes harms people (for example, some approaches unintentionally make depression worse) and waste time and money. This diploma course was created to provide that missing knowledge and teach the necessary skills so people can be genuinely more effective at helping others. It is a scientifically sound, skills-based qualification.

Q: To help people, what should I be able to do?

A: You need to know how to quickly set about treating depression, anger and anxiety disorders, addiction, compulsive behaviours, trauma, sexual and relationship problems. The checklist alongside outlines what a member of the public seeking help should expect from any form of counselling or psychotherapeutic intervention. It can also help counsellors and other health professionals assess whether they need more training to deal with serious emotional distress (by simply asking themselves how confident they feel about doing everything on the list).

Q: What are the 'human givens'?

A: The human givens are Nature's endowment to our species: the genetic knowledge that drives each of us to create a life that works well. The effect of this knowledge is that we continually experience needs: physical and emotional. Our physical needs are obvious enough, food, water, air etc, but our innate emotional needs are equally important forms of nutrition because, when they are not met in balance, we become seriously distressed and even mentally ill. They include: the need for security, attention, autonomy and control, emotional connection to others (love, intimacy, friendship), status and connection to the wider community, to achieve competence and be stretched in such a way that our life is meaningful. Nature also gives us the resources to help us meet these needs, for example, memory, imagination and problem-

▶ solving abilities. It is these innate needs and resources that together make up the human givens. To be effective as psychotherapists, clinicians or teachers we have to work in alignment with them, because it is the human givens that make us who we are.

An effective psychotherapist or counsellor should...

- know how to build rapport quickly with distressed people
- understand the cycle of depression and how to lift it
- help immediately with anxiety problems, such as panic attacks, trauma (PTSD), phobias or other fear-related symptoms
- be able to help with all kinds of addiction
- be prepared and equipped to give advice if needed or asked for
- know how to get relevant, good-quality information from their clients
- not use jargon or 'psychobabble' or tell people that psychotherapy is likely to be 'painful'
- be supportive when difficult feelings emerge, but not encourage people to get emotional beyond the normal need to 'let go' of any bottled-up feelings
- not dwell unduly on the past
- assist clients to develop social skills so that their need for affection, friendship, pleasure, intimacy and connection to the wider community can be better fulfilled
- help clients to draw on their own life resources (which are usually greater than they think)
- be considerate of the effects of psychotherapy on the people close to their clients – family, friends, colleagues etc.
- know how to help clients to unwind and relax deeply
- know how to relieve physical pain symptoms
- help clients think about their problems in new and more empowering ways
- be prepared to set tasks between sessions when appropriate
- take as few sessions as possible
- increase their clients' self-confidence and independence and make sure they feel better after every consultation.

Q: What is a human givens therapist?

A: Human givens therapists work from the most up-to-date and effective, solution-focused understanding of how best to help distressed people. Their underlying strategy is to identify which innate emotional needs are not being met well in a client's life, and why – because this is always the root cause of distress. They then help the client to remove the psychological or environmental obstacles that are preventing them from meeting their needs (trauma, conditioning, compulsions, addictions etc.) using interventions that have been proven effective time and again. The approach developed from a solid knowledge base of what is known about human behaviour, neurobiology and psychology – the mind/body link – and feedback from outcome research.

Q: Who is this course suitable for?

A: The Human Givens Diploma has run for fourteen years. It is primarily aimed at anyone already working in a therapeutic or educational capacity that wishes to improve their skill level, deepen their understanding of human behaviour and learn why people are so vulnerable to mental illness. However, many others wishing to draw on human givens, in business coaching, management or to make a career change, have completed the course. You should be a good 'people person', have an advanced level of education and be prepared to engage fully in the teaching process.

Q: Must I have personal counselling or psychotherapy myself to do this course?

A: No. One of the many myths that grew up in the field is that practitioners need to undergo many hours of psychotherapy themselves. Practitioners who have personal therapy as part of their training are not more effective than those who don't, so this is not a requirement. People only need therapy when their lives aren't working. Just as we only need to take medicine when we are ill – and then in the right quantity, and at the right time, from someone who really understands our condition. What you need to become a therapist is intelligence, aptitude, spare capacity and life experience.

What our diploma students say ...

"It was two dazzling weeks of learning and looking in the mirror, contemplating my style and entering a whole new perspective on my professional identity. A great experience..."

ROBERT CROMMELIN

"The Human Givens approach really needs to be brought to the attention of schools and children's services – and adopted by them!"

DAWN SWAN

"It didn't feel like a course to train for 'work'. It's more a blueprint for life, absolutely fascinating. HG has changed my life, given direction to my work and improved my effectiveness as a GP."

ADAM LAKE

"Thoroughly enjoyable and challenging two weeks. The course was very well organised with a good balance of teaching, practicing & exercises. Inspiring and has reaffirmed my goal to change my career to Human Givens therapy."

DAVID SLADE

"The organising ideas make complete sense and the course has the perfect balance of delivering information clearly and interspersing it with demonstrations and practical exercises in an intriguing variety of ways that allowed us to really know and understand."

JACQUI ASTON

"Hard work but I thoroughly enjoyed it – stimulating and challenging, coherent and well thought out in terms of style and presentation. The handbook is brilliant and it was very useful to have it before the course started so I could prepare. I really appreciate the opportunity to learn so many new things that feel instinctively right."

BRIGIT PEACOCK

"A much-needed model for humanity – enabling people to use nature's resources to fulfil emotional needs. The depth and quality of the knowledge in HG is testament to all those who have worked so hard to get these well needed ideas out to the wider public and into society."

How to apply for the Diploma course

Part I of the Human Givens College Diploma course consists of attendance at eighteen Human Givens College training days made up of fourteen one-day courses and two two-day courses – see the diagram on page 2. (Fifteen of the training days are core diploma subjects. Simply choose three training days from the remaining ‘free choice’ titles to make up the required number.)

Several Part I core days can be studied online, visit: www.hgonlinecourses.com

You may find, therefore, if you have attended some of our training already, that you are well on the way to completing Part I.

Before attending the two-week course which makes up Part II, you will need to have completed a minimum of 12 of the core diploma training days (this is to ensure you get the most out of your two weeks).

To qualify for full accreditation as a human givers therapist by this route, you must complete Part I within eighteen months of finishing Part II and then pass Part III (the HG Practitioner's Diploma). To apply for a place on Part II of the course, you need to complete an application form and send this to us with the required registration fee of £250 + vat (£300). This fee (which is non-transferable and non-refundable) is then deducted from the total course fee due. We recommend that you attend one core diploma training day (live or online) before applying.

To obtain an application form, you can download a pdf from our website at www.humangivenscollege.com/diploma and click on the 'How to apply' link, or call the College office on 01323 811690.

Please either fax it to us on 01323 811486, or post it to us at: Human Givens College, Chalvington, East Sussex BN27 3TD.

When assessing applications, academic qualifications are not the only criteria we look for – aptitude, intelligence and the spare mental capacity needed to digest what is taught, along with the ability to apply it in creative and practical ways, are also important.

Fees: The full fee for the Part II is £2,875 + vat (£3,450). This includes the comprehensive course manual, refreshments and a light lunch each day. As soon as your place is allocated we will send you confirmation details. An invoice for the balance of the course fee will be sent separately – the full fee for Part II must be paid at least one month before it begins.

After completing Part II of the HG Diploma course, you can obtain an HG Practitioner's Diploma (known as Part III) by undergoing an assessment based on demonstration of your clinical skills with a real patient/s. The fee for this is £250 + vat (£300). This can be taken at any time from the end of the diploma course to two years after completing it. Having passed Part III, you will be a fully-qualified human givers practitioner and eligible for Registered Membership of the Human Givens Institute (see: www.hgi.org.uk for further information.)
